Metal Speciation and Contamination of Soil provides a thorough overview of the biogeochemical processes governing the behavior, transport, and bioavailability of heavy metals in contaminated soils and suggests alternative approaches for effective remediation. Metal Speciation and Contamination of Soil provides a thorough overview of the biogeochemical processes governing the behavior, transport, and bioavailability of heavy metals in contaminated soils and suggests alternative approaches for effective remediation. However, there have been few studies on the effect of plants on trace metals speciation and transportation in e-waste contaminated soil. Electronics dismantling activities in China primarily took place in the provinces of Guangdong and Zhejiang [10] , [23] , where the local soils have become seriously polluted by e-waste, and have been exposed to rainfall and plant growth.
